Hi Paul,

Thought this Senate bill might be of interest to you. It flew through committee and has broad bipartisan support so I expect it will survive largely intact.

Attached is a copy of the senate bill. It has lots of good stuff on SDWA & CWA in it, including the following under Subtitle A (Drinking Water):

Sec. 7107. Reducing lead in drinking water

Subsection (a) of section 7107 amends the Safe Drinking Water Act to add a grant program for replacement of lead service lines, testing, planning, corrosion control, and education. Partial lead service line replacement is not eligible for assistance. Assistance to low income homeowners to remove the privately owned portion of the service line is eligible for assistance. This section authorizes $60 million for each of fiscal years 2017 through 2021, for a total of $300 million over five years.

Subsection (b) directs the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer $20 million to EPA to begin implementation of this program immediately.

Senate on verge of passing $9 billion water projects bill

Senate on verge of passing $9 billion water projects bill www.washingtonexaminer.com The Senate is poised to vote this week on legislation that its supporters see as critical in the wake of flooding in Louisiana and a lead water crisis in Michigan. The $9 billion Water Resources Development Act of 2016 is on the Senate floor this week after flying through committee in April. The bill funds 25 Army Corps of Engineers projects worth $4.5 billion that lawmakers have already authorized, and would spend $4.8 billion on water infrastructure updates throughout the country. Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said Wednesday that the bill is the biggest thing on the Senate's plate during its first week back from the summer recess. We're going to try and pass the WRDA bill this week, he said. McConnell filed a motion to proceed on the bill Tuesday afternoon and senators were engaging in final negotiations over possible amendments to the bill Wednesday.
